

CLIMATE FOR HEALTH OVERVIEW

Health professionals have always been on the front lines of caring for their patients and advocating for solutions to America's most pressing public health challenges, and now is the time for health professionals to leverage our leadership on climate change throughout our organizations, institutions and communities. We can help put America on a path to a thriving society that supports the health and well being of Americans and people worldwide. Our oath of responsibility to our patients and communities must now include helping them understand that caring for their health means caring about and supporting climate solutions. As the voice of health for all Americans, we can prepare and protect them from the health consequences of climate change, and promote the health benefits of urgent action on solutions.

Climate for Health is a national initiative led by a diverse network of leaders from across the health sector representing key health care, public health, clinical and medical institutions and associations. By joining Climate for Health, leaders commit to implementing climate change solutions within our own organizations, and work together to prepare, empower and inspire our patients, staff, communities and other health leaders on solutions.

By making the Path to Positive pledge through Climate for Health, you'll get access to free resources that will empower your leadership on climate solutions:

- Practical tools, tips, talking points, communication templates and social media tips to help you communicate on climate change impacts and solutions
- Resources and ideas to engage your community and help get patients, staff, communities, other health leaders on the path to positive
- Success stories from other health leaders who are making a difference within their hospitals and organizations - to provide you with ideas and inspiration
- Support from a nationwide network of health leaders who are committed to making a difference through Climate for Health
- Training & webinars rich with information and guidance on climate change engagement

Let's get on the path to a positive future together. Please join us at climateforhealth.org.
